- 1 | -->I have followed the nuclear waste issue for more than three decades now and I must tell you that I am tired fo the empty promises of something being done to deal with this issue. Frankly, I came the the conclusion years ago that the waste issue was perplexing enough to warrant the elimination of the creration of nuclear waste until all the technical and political issues surrounding it can be adequately answered. In 2
- 3 | this case, there are serious questions regarding the technical aspects of using Yucca Mountain to cause its demise. But perhpas more importantly, the political issue of forcing a community to accept dangerous material for permanent storage is specious. In a democracy, the people should be the sovereigns not the government or their proxies, the utilities.
